

Q: How will you measure student learning gaps when kids return to school?

A: Day One Diagnostics from USATestprep

After 4 - 5 months away from the classroom, kids will be behind when school starts next year. You will want to measure where kids are relative to grade level and state standards. With USATestprep, you already have everything you need.

Did You Know?

Start with Day One Diagnostics. All of our courses include Day One Diagnostics - 100% standards-aligned pre-built diagnostic assessments with proven data you can measure against throughout the year.

Identify the Gaps. We specialize in helping assess where students are against state standards for every subject and grade level.

Ensure Equity. The state standards provide the best way to measure students in a common, unbiased framework. USATestprep provides equitable access to all kids, across courses and grade levels, for both in-classroom and at-home learning.

Individualize Remediation. Once gaps are identified, we provide you with the student data you need to set up individualized remediation, helping you bring each student up to standard -- or grade level -- as quickly as possible.

Register for Professional Development. We're helping educators get an early jump on next school year with Day One Diagnostics summer training. Start the school year confidently with a documented plan for how you'll assess, remediate, and encourage students.
